QUESTION 6*ENVIRONMENTAL ISSUES THAT CAUSE ILL HEALTH

Read the following newspaper article and answer the questions that follow

ARE CAGED CHICKENS MISERABLE?

Are cramped chickens crazy chickens? Researchers are trying to answer this question by means of several studies that intend to take the emotions out of an angry debate between animal welfare groups and producers.

At issue are small cages, typically 61cm wide by 65cm deep, which can be shared by up to nine hens. About 96% of eggs sold come from hens which live in so called battery cages from the day they're born until their egg-laying days end 18 – 24 months later.

Public opinion tends to side with those who oppose the cages.

Peter Skewes, a Clemson University researcher, is leading one of the studies comparing how different housing affects egg-laying hens. He says there are plenty of "emotional" opinions about whether the cages are inhumane, but few are based on facts.

"Hopefully, we will contribute something, so that decisions can be made based on science and knowledge about how we house birds, and the implications for different systems," said Skewes, who is in the early stages of a three year study funded by the US Department of Agriculture.

Bruce Friedrich, a spokesman for 'People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals' said that banning the cages was a solution to an obvious problem.

Think about the effects of not moving for up to 24 months.' Their bones and muscles waste away and they go insane'.

Paul Shapiro, senior director of the Humane Society of the United States' Factory Farming Campaign, agreed.

'The egg industry is trying to muddy the waters by misleading people into believing that it is possible to confine birds in barren, tiny cages and have high welfare' he said.

A number of us who work in the animal welfare field are frustrated at efforts saying one system is all good or all bad and not being able to quantify welfare values,' Golab said. We want to look for the best possible solution we can for raising these animals.'

QUESTION 8*SPORT AND NATION BUILDING

www.orakonnews.com President Nelson Mandela in his #6 Springboks Rugby Jersey

Nelson Mandela used the platform of the 1995 Rugby World Cup very successfully as a nation building exercise. He reached out to the white community and was criticized by his own constituency for it. The question to be asked is, “Is sport a long term nation building exercise?” Remember also that policy will force, through the quota system, a 50% non white component in the Springbok World Cup Squad for 2019. Fikile Mbalula (Minister of Sport) has recently banned the governing bodies of cricket, rugby, netball and athletics from bidding for any international tournaments in the Republic until the next EminentPerson’s review as a result of their findings that those bodies had not transformed to their own transformation targets.

In an essay of approximately one page discuss the role of sport in nation building using the following points

- What do you understand by the terms “nation building” and “quota” systems (2x2=4)
- Will the quota system build or break down sport in a nation? (2x2=4)
- Discuss how our ‘worship’ of sports heroes can also either build or break down a nation or a person (2x2=4)

QUESTION 9:*RELATIONSHIPS

Read the cartoon and the statement below and answer the questions that follow:

“The relationships we have with the people around us can either enhance our lives and contribute in a positive way to our well-being, or can be harmful to our well-being.”

Consider the cartoon and the above statement and write an essay on the ways in which our lives are impacted by our relationships. Include the following:

- Name any 3 types of relationships we have with those around us. (3x 1=3)
- For each type of relationship mentioned, name one quality that enhances that relationship (3x1=3)
- For each type of relationship, discuss TWO ways, negative or positive, in which the relationship could affect your well-being. (3 x2=6)

(1=structure; 1=flow; 1=insight)

QUESTION 10:*STUDY SKILLS*Read the statement below and answer the questions that follow

An individual's learning style refers to the preferred way in which an individual absorbs, processes, comprehends and retains information. For example, when learning how to build a clock, some students understand the process by following verbal instructions, while others have to physically manipulate the clock themselves.

Consider the above and write an essay on learning styles in which you do the following:

- Name the three learning styles (3)
- Discuss 2 characteristics that people who exhibit each style display (3 x 2=6)
- Name 3 ways how Hillcrest High School accommodates different learning styles (3)

(1=structure; 1=flow; 1=insight)
