SECTION B: CASE STUDIES

Question 7:

Positive peer pressure

Loyiso was not interested in studying. He found most of his homework too boring. He usually just copied from his best friend, Tumelo. One day Tumelo was chosen to go on a leadership camp. When he returned, he had a different attitude. He was inspired to help his friends. So he organised for them to meet every afternoon after school and do homework and study for tests, as a group.

Loyiso did not want to join the study group. But, after a while, he felt so left out he joined. There he was not allowed to copy homework and he had to make a contribution. Soon he started doing better at school. He even started enjoying his subjects because he understood them better. 'Yes,' Tumelo told him, 'success breeds more success!'
