Communities, parents have to become part of school bullying solution – education department

KaveelSingh 18 October

The department of education in KwaZulu-Natal has called on parents, communities and all other stakeholders to come together to combat school bullying.

“We are very much disturbed by this kind of continued violence that we see happening in our schools. As the department of education, it is not a matter we can address alone,” department spokesperson Muzi Mahlambi told News24.

Mahlambi made the statement following a video that emerged online this week, showing a street brawl between two groups of boys allegedly from Palmview and Woodview Secondary schools in Phoenix, Durban.

The video gained traction on multiple social media platforms, with many expressing disgust at the savagery and violence displayed by the youngsters.

In the video, two boys begin kicking and punching another boy in the head. Pupils can be heard jeering in the background as the youngsters land devastating blows to the back of the boy's head. Two more youngsters join in kicking the boy as he lies on the ground clutching his head. The assault halts after a car stops and a man exits the vehicle to break up the fight.

Mahlambi said the department was working with the police. He said he feared bullying could increase.

He urged parents to take any form of bullying seriously. “Do not take small issues too granted.”

“We will take disciplinary actions. We want to set an example here. We will also take actions against [the] boys shouting and filming. They are equally guilty.

He added: ‘it must be noted, these incidents don't just emanate from school, but also from home.

5.1 According to the article, whose responsibility is it to combat school bullying?
